Magellan, tradition revisited!
 A tradition open to prolific developments, which, while remaining loyal to the values of the past, is capable of adapting to today's lifestyles and freely flirts with innovation...
 A new look and a new synthesis that combine the charms of yesteryear with the comfort and convenience of the present day.

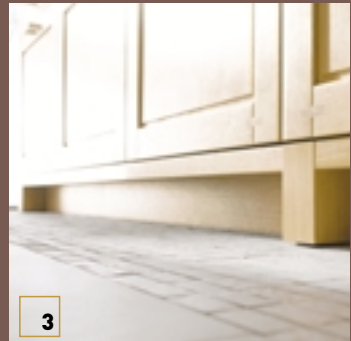

MAGELLAN

1
 The traditional fronts are fitted with the most efficient opening systems.

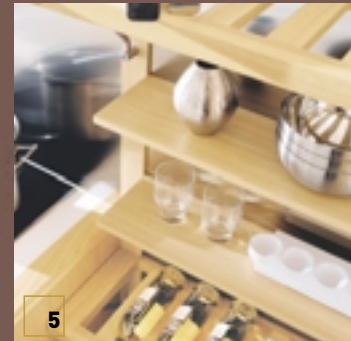

2
 Floor to wall extension of the vertical elements, for a flawless look.

3
 Everywhere, priority is given to wood, to its solid look and warm feel.

4
 Finishes centred on the enhancement of wood and woodwork.

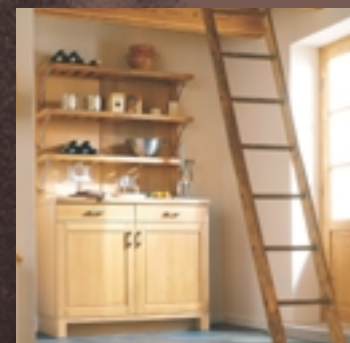

5
 For Magellan, Mobalpa has designed and developed Magis, a decorative range with a host of resources.

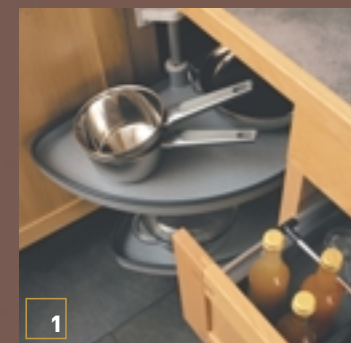

Alain Ricard Designer
 Alain Ricard, who has been a regular partner of Mobalpa since 1999, is the creator of the Magellan kitchen, a model that revives the spirit of tradition. Previously, he also designed Mobalpa's very beautiful metier (professional) line units, an updated version evocative of bygone boutiques.

Even though it has only just been unveiled, the Magellan range is already proving a great success with trade professionals and the general public alike. This range fully expresses the way Mobalpa sees the new Spirit of Tradition. The emphasis is on the material used, with the assemblies on the door front combining wood cut along and across the grain.
 The Magellan model is available in four different finishes (natural, bleached, amber and oiled oak) and can harmonise with all types of interior design, whether contemporary or more classical.

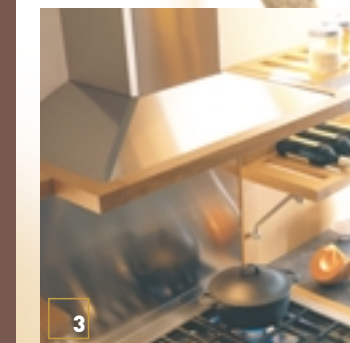

Magellan can elegantly live alongside such furniture as dressers, large cupboards and Belfast sinks.

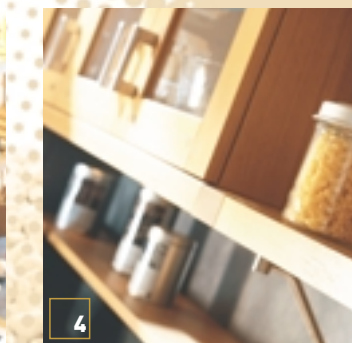

1
 Intelligent and practical items of equipment are concealed behind the traditional fronts.

2
 A successful combination of materials for these wooden racks held up by stainless steel brackets.

3
 Mobalpa has developed an exclusive partnership with Roblin for this wood trimmed canopy.

4
 The generous size (4cm) of these shelves gives a rich look to this range.
